Other Teaching Materials

“Interyou Session” (co-created with Neil Bearden). Independent Study Project. At the beginning of the MBA program, students video record questions for their future self. Their answers are video recorded when they are about to graduate and edited into a conversation with themselves that serves as the basis for a reflection paper.

“Someone who impacted you” (co-created with Neil Bearden). Students contact someone who had a large impact on their life without realizing it and share the story with that person and then with the class. Used in Neil Bearden’s Storytelling Workshop in the MBA program.

“Second Order Self Journal” (co-created with Neil Bearden and Warren Tierney). Independent Study Project and CSP assignment. The student chooses an aspect of their interpersonal skills they would like to improve. Then they use a website to send electronic messages to themselves in the future, reminding their future self to be more like their second-order self. They also keep a journal of when they received the reminders, what they did in response, and what happened next.

“Role-Play for the World” (co-created with Martin Schweinsberg, Horacio Falcão, and Phil Parker). Assignment for Organizational Behavior 1 and the Negotiation MBA elective. Students write their own teaching role-plays geared towards emerging markets.

“Discussion Case for the World” (co-created with Neil Bearden). Assignment for Organizational Behavior 1. Students write their own brief discussion cases geared towards emerging markets.

PowerPoint slides, syllabus, and instructor script from our Crowdsourcing Science PhD course (materials co-created with Martin Schweinsberg and Neil Bearden). Includes lectures on “The Crisis of Confidence in Science,” “The Replication Revolution,” and “The Open Data Movement.” Publicly available at: <https://osf.io/hj9zr/>

Study Group 360 (co-created with Warren Tierney). An open-source 360 system that allows for the automated creation of individualized feedback reports for students. Compares self-ratings and peer ratings on interpersonal and teamwork skills. Used in INSEAD’s Organizational Behavior 1 core course on both campuses.

Personality Perceptions Assessment (co-created with Warren Tierney and Katja Smuk). An open-source personality report system that allows for the automated creation of individualized reports. Compares self-ratings and peer ratings on the Big 5 personality traits. Used in INSEAD's Organizational Behavior 1 core course on both campuses.
